

Erdogan cartoon “free speech”; Netanyahu “Anti-Semitic”

newobserveronline.com

The cartoonist at the Süddeutsche Zeitung has been sacked for drawing a sketch of Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu – even though his employers defended him under “free speech” for a similar cartoon of Turkish president Recep Erdogan.

The Süddeutsche Zeitung – one of Germany’s largest daily newspapers – had come under intense criticism from the Jewish lobby in Germany following the publication of cartoonist Dieter Hanitzsch’s picture last month.

The cartoon portrayed Netanyahu in the clothing of Jewish performer “Netta” (who won the Eurovision song contest with a screeching noise which could only be described as “music” by artistic illiterates) clutching a military missile in his hand.

The rocket has a Star of David on it, and in the words “Eurovision Song Contest,” a Star of David has replaced the “v.”

In the speech bubble, Netanyahu is saying “next year in Jerusalem!” – an accurate quote from the Israeli Prime Minister, which is also a play on the often-used phrase by Jews through the centuries referring to their desire to return to Palestine.

No no

The drawing was immediately attacked as “anti-Semitic by the Jew Felix Klein, who works as the German government’s “anti-Semitism commissioner,” who claimed that it reminded him of cartoons in Nazi-era publication Der Stürmer.

Editors-in-chief of the Süddeutsche Zeitung formally apologized for having published the cartoon, and immediately fired Hanitzsch who refused to apologize and denied that his cartoon was anti-Semitic in any way.

The sacking stands in strong contrast to the behavior of the Süddeutsche Zeitung in a previous 2016 controversy involving Hanitzsch and cartoons of Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan.

Those cartoons portrayed Erdogan as a stereotypical “Ottoman Turk” complete with hat, robe, and curved sword, painting graffiti depicting the hanging of “freedom of opinion.”

When the Turkish government objected to that cartoon, the editors of the Süddeutsche Zeitung refused to sack Hanitzsch, and instead defended him by saying that it was his “freedom of speech” to characterize public figures in this way.

Hanitzsch, who claims to be a liberal, has however found out the hard way that “freedom of speech” and “democracy” only applies when Jewish sensibilities are unaffected: and that when these same standards are applied to Jews, “freedom of speech” flies out the window.

The ADL just got booted from Starbucks "Racist Training" over pro-racist Israel hypocrisy.

The Anti-Defamation League – previously slated to lead the “anti-racist” training at Starbucks following a recent made-up “racial” incident in Philadelphia – has been booted from the program over that organization’s blatant hypocrisy in supporting the racially-biased State of Israel while demanding “non-racialism” from gentiles.

A campaign to boot the ADL from the Starbucks “anti-bias” training launched by the far left has been successful. Depicted here is the meme they used in their online campaign.

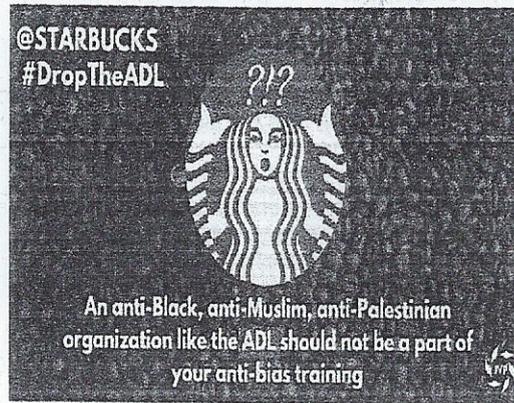

Just loafing

The “anti-bias” training was announced following an incident when two non-paying Blacks squatting in a coffee shop located in crime-ridden majority non-White Philadelphia were arrested after staff called police, saying they were trespassing.

A report in the Jewish Telegraphic Agency (JTA) said that the Anti-Defamation League’s Chief Executive Officer, Jonathan Greenblatt, was one of four “civil rights leaders” tasked with developing Starbucks’ “anti-bias training” next month, but would “no longer be taking a leading role.”

The other three “civil rights leaders” were named as Sherrilyn Ifill of the

Starbucks: Drop the ADL

NAACP’s Legal Defense Fund, Bryan Stevenson of the Equal Justice Initiative and Heather McGhee of the liberal think tank Demos.

On April 17, Starbucks issued a press statement saying the “anti-bias training” would be “developed with guidance from several national and local experts confronting racial bias, including Bryan Stevenson, founder and executive director of the Equal Justice Initiative; Sherrilyn Ifill, president and director-counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund; Heather McGhee, president of Demos; former U. S. Attorney General Eric Holder; and Jonathan Greenblatt, CEO of the Anti-Defamation League. Starbucks will involve these experts in monitoring and reviewing the effectiveness of the measures we undertake.”

However, a press release from Starbucks issued on April 26 said that the program will now only be run by the Stevenson, Ifill and McGhee team, and that the ADL will only be one of “a diverse array of organizations and civil rights experts” that Starbucks will consult.

According to the JTA, “Greenblatt’s original role was criticized by left wing activists who objected to, among other things, ADL’s work with police departments and its support of Israel.

According to a press statement issued by JVP, that organization “welcomes the clear decision by Starbucks to remove the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) from leadership in this initiative, and to seek guidance from organizations who serve directly impacted communities, including Muslims, LGBTQ people, Latin communities and immigrants who are under threat in our country.

Touchy

“The demotion of the ADL from a leadership role is a clear reflection of the recognition by a wide variety of social justice organizations and individuals that ADL’s status as a civil rights organization is compromised given its history and practices of anti-Muslim, anti-Palestinian, and anti-Black racism,” said Rebecca Vilkomerson, Executive Director of JVP.

“JVP is particularly concerned with collaborations between U. S. and Israeli police and military forces – and their impacts on Palestinians there and all people of color here.

“In just a week, we’ve noticed and welcomed the increased scrutiny of the ADL’s sponsorship of those police exchanges, and the growing recognition that those exchanges are incompatible with a vision of safety for all.

“Any organization working for civil rights should know that militarized policing is a huge problem that overwhelmingly affects communities of color,” the JVP statement said.

While the JVP is no friend of White people, and therefore just as much an enemy to them as is the ADL, the fact that the far left has started to see through the overt hypocrisy of the Jewish establishment is a good sign that the edifice of Jewish Supremacism is starting to crack.
